Egyptian Artifacts

MUMMY BEADS

Terra cotta beads glazed with faience and predominately of blue and earth hues. The less affluent members of society tended to encase their mummies in strands of brightly colored beads. Cleaned and re-strung for use as jewelry, the beads date to the XXVI Dynasty, Ca. 600BC.

323. 26" long single strand. $35.00
 324. 28" long multi-strand. $95.00

325. 25" long single strand-ovoid-shaped, blue-green beads punctuated by 12K gold balls and terminating with a protective amulet. The faience amulet depicting the eye of Horus was intended to ward off the "evil eye" from its' wearer. $250.00
 326. 20" long strand similar to the above; the amulet represents Thoth, the scribe. Not all Egyptians were literate and the scribe occupied an important stratum of society. $225.00

USHABTI

The Answerer or Servant for the deceased. Our selection is faience glazed terra cotta of a blue-green color. All XXVI Dynasty, ca. 600 BC, unless noted.

 328. 4" tall. $150.00
 329. 4" tall with hieroglyphic inscription on the obverse, Chapter V of the Book of the Dead, a passage from a fine example of Egyptian literature. $175.00
 330. 3¼"-3½" blue Ushabti from Tuna el Gebel, XXX Dynasty, Ca. 375 BC. The back pillar contains an inscription from Book of the Dead, Chapter V. $195.00

331. 4 3/4" tall blue faience Ushabti with inscription. $400.00
 332. 4 3/8" tall lovely blue faience Ushabti, inscribed and facial features enhanced by a dark glaze. $450.00
 333. 4 1/2" tall deep blue Ushabti with enhanced features and inscriptions. The ANKH, symbol of eternal life, of one of the hieroglyphic characters depicted on obverse of the magnificent statuette. $500.00
 334. 6" tall green faience Ushabti inscribed with the owner's name Pet O Siris, XXVII Dynasty, Ca. 500 BC. a more personal example of the funerary custom. $775.00

SCARABS AND AMULETS

335. 4 1/4" wide winged scarab and 4 amulets, 1 3/4"-2" tall. The amulets represent the four sons of Horus whose similar images are depicted on the canopic jars that held the vital organs of the deceased. The winged scarab would be placed near the heart of the deceased among the cloth wrappings. All 5 are of a bright blue faience and comment upon the funeral practice of the culture.

$1500.00

336. KNAPPED FLINT SCRAPER
 5" tall. Paleolithic, ca. 350,000-100,000 BC. A fine example of an early tool.

$225.00

The following faience amulets date to the XXVI Dynasty, Ca. 600 BC.

Greek and Italian Painted Pottery

346. Terra cotta kothon. Circular vessel with a single handle and wide aperture used to contain perfume. The intact vessel is decorated with a series of red and black glazed concentric circles framing the aperture and reserved against the red glaze ground of the kothon. Corinthian, ca. 300 BC.  $5\frac{1}{2}$ " wide,  $1\frac{1}{2}$ " tall.

$275.00

347. Terra cotta kyathos, a single handled drinking cup covered with a black glaze and known as bucchero ware. An Italian example of an older Greek type of drinking vessel. Etruscan, ca. 4-3 Centuries BC. intact, 4" diameter,  $2\frac{1}{2}$ " tall bowl, 5" handle.

$275.00

348. Terra cotta skyphos. Delicate example of a two handled drinking cup painted with the strong black glaze of Attic pottery. Athens, ca. 5th. Century BC., intact,  $2\frac{1}{4}$ " tall,  $2\frac{3}{4}$ " diameter.

$225.00

350. Terra cotta pyxis. Miniature footed dish whose cover has similar decoration to No. 349. Apulian, South Italian, Ca. 330 BC. Intact,  $3\frac{1}{2}$ " tall,  $3\frac{1}{4}$ " diameter.

$525.00

349. Terra cotta lekanis. Large black glazed dish flanked by two handles and resting on a footed base. The painted cover is divided into 4 compartments and enhanced by a series of palmettes and a profile of a female head. The woman is depicted as a lady of fashion wearing a necklace and earrings, her hair dressed with a kekryphalos and covered with a stephane. The palmettes and female head are reserved in a red glaze against the black ground of the cover. The hair is depicted in the same black glaze with jewelry and details articulated in white. An impressive example of ancient painting illustrating a view of contemporary fashion. Apulian, South Italian, ca. 330 BC. Hairline age crack, reinforced by glue. 6  $\frac{1}{4}$ " tall. \$975.00

351. Terra cotta guttus. Variation of a vessel used to contain oil with single handle and long spout. The body is painted with a rich black glaze as is the lower portion of the foot. The rest of the foot is painted with a red glaze. The center medallion is decorated with a relief depiction of a youth with flowing hair. This vessel is a fine example of "Calenian Ware" recognized by the impressive quality of the relief decoration and the metallic sheen of the dark glaze. Tarentum, Southern Italy, ca. 300 BC. Intact, save for two slight chips on base and spout. 6" tall at spout. $650.00
352. Terra cotta skyphos. Large two handled drinking cup with floral motif executed in red and white glaze against a black background. South Italian, ca. 350 BC., intact. 5  $\frac{1}{4}$ " tall, 4  $\frac{1}{4}$ " diameter. \$300.00
353. Terra cotta oinochoe. Elegant vessel of slender proportions decorated with palmette, meander and dart motifs. The rich polychrome glazes against the black background denote this "Gnathian Ware" vessel as an imposing example of ancient miniature painting. In the year 622 AD, Khusroes II of the Sassanian Empire raised an army and seized the True Cross from its Byzantine guardians in Jerusalem. He was leader of the Zoroastrian faith, an avowed enemy of Christianity and he carried the Cross back to Persia in triumph. A few years later in 625, the Byzantines in turn marched into Persia, defeated Khusroes and recaptured the symbol of their religion, taking the Cross back to Jerusalem. We can offer a coin of each of these fascinating rulers:

The Shroud Of Turin

The Shroud of Turin is an ancient cloth supposed to have contained the body of Jesus, which was brought back to Europe by a returning Crusader in the 11th. Century. The cloth was first photographed in 1898 by Secunda Pia, and the results shook the World of Religion, for the developed plates clearly revealed the positive image of the man whose body it had shrouded - a man identified as Jesus Christ! Since that time, the Shroud has been subjected to countless scientific tests, the latest of which reveals on the eyes two coins identified tentatively as the leptons or "pennies" of Pontius Pilate, Roman Procurator of Judea at the time of the Crucifixion, the year 31 AD. For the full fascinating story of the Shroud of Turin see The Numismatist for July, 1978. Meanwhile we offer:

The Coins Of The Crusaders

At the beginning of the 11th Century, religious fervor rocked Europe, and the Crusade to free the Holy Land from the clutches of the Infidel signalled the start of some two hundred years of unrest. Virtually all who could bear arms enlisted in the Holy Cause, even including children as young as eight years of age. They swept through Eurpoe in swarms, slaughtering all "non-believers" they encountered and entered the Holy Land where they encountered stiff resistance. Their sovereign rulers, safe at home, minted in many cases special coins to pay the troops, these coins according to the custom of the day, being crude small (dime-size) pieces of thin silver, and usually called deniers. We offer -----

From a hoard recently unearthed in the Holy Land, the dinero of Kings Henry III-V. 1039-1125 AD. For the coin, very fine condition, minted in Lucca, Italy, at $6.00 each

The Bohemund of Antioch. 1201-1222 AD. very fine, at $12.00 each

The scarce deniers of Conrad of Genoa. 1140 AD. very fine or better at $15.00 each or all three of the above at $30.00

And the small square silver dirhem of the Almohades of North Africa, avowed foes of the Crusaders, minted by Caliph Abd El Mumin. 1130-1163 AD. Very fine. at $5.00 each

Crusader Coins of the Achaian League

After the Knights of the Fourth Crusade sacked Constantinople instead of going on to the Holy Land in 1204 AD, the land hungry Frankish nobles set up their own little kingdoms in Greece. A roll call of their names reads like the story of the Crusades and their little silver deniers are much in demand by history-minded collectors. We offer the following, all in VF or better:

Guilliaume de Villehardin 1245-78AD, Guilliaume de la Roche 1280-87 AD, Charles II of Anjou-Naples 1285-87 AD, Florent de Hainaut 1289-97 AD, Isabelle de Villehardouin 1297-1301 AD, Philippe de Savoie 1301-07 AD. and Philippe de Tarente 1307-1313 AD. at $15.00 or all seven for $90.00

Siamese Porcelain Gambling Tokens

Once plentiful, these colorful porcelain tiles were used up to 1865 as money in then far-away Siam. At that time, Bangkok was about as far as a European ship could sail without stopping for provisions, and the land-starved crew was usually given liberty to enjoy the pleasures of the port. Because there was not enough money in circulation, each gambling palace, saloon, restaurant or whatever was permitted to issue its own porcelain money, which was then exchanged after the sailors had left. The system was outlawed by Mongkut, the famous King of Siam of movie and stage in 1965 and the little tiles passed into numismatic history. Sizes vary between dime and quarter.

The Treasure of the Chameau

Le Chameau (The Camel) was a French transport ship armed with 48 cannons, which sailed from Rochefort early in July 1725, bound for Quebec with 82,010 livres of gold, silver, and copper coins to relieve the currency shortage in Canada. On August 25th, battered by a sudden hurricane, she crashed into a rock (known to this day as Chameau Rock) and went to the bottom with all her cargo and 316 officers, men, and passengers. There were no survivors and the treasure lay on the bottom until 1965, when salvage operations were partially successful and much of the bullion was recovered. We can offer one of these crown-sized silver ecus bearing the portrait of King Louis XV and dated 1725. These pieces lay on the sea bottom for 240 years and show it, being in most cases, just identifiable. With each coin, we will include the paperback issue of the full story of the Chameau, written by Alex Storm, one of the divers on the salvage effort. A great gift for any imaginative youngster or anyone interested in the romance of the sea.

Civil War Magnus Sheets

Printed on the back of notepaper (all that was available) by Charles Magnus during the Civil War, these lovely relics were intended to bring the lyrics (and parodies) of the popular songs of the day to the people and, in addition, the blank reverses could be used to pen short notes. Magnus was the designer and printer of many of the sought after Civil War Patriotic covers which were so popular then. Each sheet is in virtually mint condition, 5" x 8" with multi-colored lithographic illustration, and highly suitable for framing. Songs of our choice (you probably wouldn't remember them anyway!)

Tanit and the Shipwreck at Shaave Ziyon

A few years ago, a diver working off the coast of Israel at a town known as Shaave Ziyon came across the wreckage of an ancient Phoenician galley, from which he pulled a barnacle-encrusted terra cotta statuette which proved to be of the Phoenician Goddess Tanit, their chief Diety. Where the galley was bound, that day about 550 years BC, is unknown, but eventually some hundred odd of little statuettes were recovered, a few of which found their way to these shores and into our possession. Badly worn by the action of the seawater, encrusted with barnacles and other sea growths, they somehow retain the dignity of a Goddess. We have only a few, 5" - 7" tall, and as described. ### Extremely Unusual Pre-Columbian Idol

Seated vessel figure 7  $\frac{3}{4}$ " tall. Made of terra cotta with hands on knees. Found in the state of Colima, Mexico, this effigy is made from typical Colima redware, however it shows strong stylistic similarities to artifacts from the Teotihuacan region, near Mexico City. These features include rectangular, incuse eyes and ear spools proportionally large to the facial characteristics. A plain simple short brimmed cap is also not atypical to Teotihuacan statuary. In this case the cap is circumvented by a 2  $\frac{1}{4}$ " diameter opening to a hollowed figure. Its probable use was to store grains or liquids to be used in the after life. Partially remaining black facial paint and a few minor age cracks are the only signs of wear on this unusual piece. Circa 300-600 AD, intact.

Pre-Columbian "Spaceman"

According to theories put forth by scientists such as Von Daniken extraterrestrial beings visited the earth in ancient times and brought advanced culture and science, interbred with existing human populations to form beings of superior intelligence and developmental capacities.

These interesting, standing terra cotta effigies are interpreted by some as representatives of extraterrestrial beings commonly called "Moon Goddess" amongst the trade. Each is slightly different, however all have helmet like headdresses, some have boots, packs, and "utility belts."

From Chancay, Peru, a southerly coastal area flourishing in the 10th-13th Centuries, these charming idols are intact.

The First "Coinage" of the New World

The use of Tajaderas replaced the barter system as the first standard medium of exchange in the New World. A thinly beaten copper implement in the shape of a hoe, the tajadera, was valued at  $1\frac{1}{2}$  Spanish reales a piece at the time of the Conquest. Found in the Zapotec region of the Oaxaca Valley, Mexico, these Tajaderas are attributed to the Aztec civilization. Circa 1400 AD. Approx.  $5\frac{1}{2}$ "
